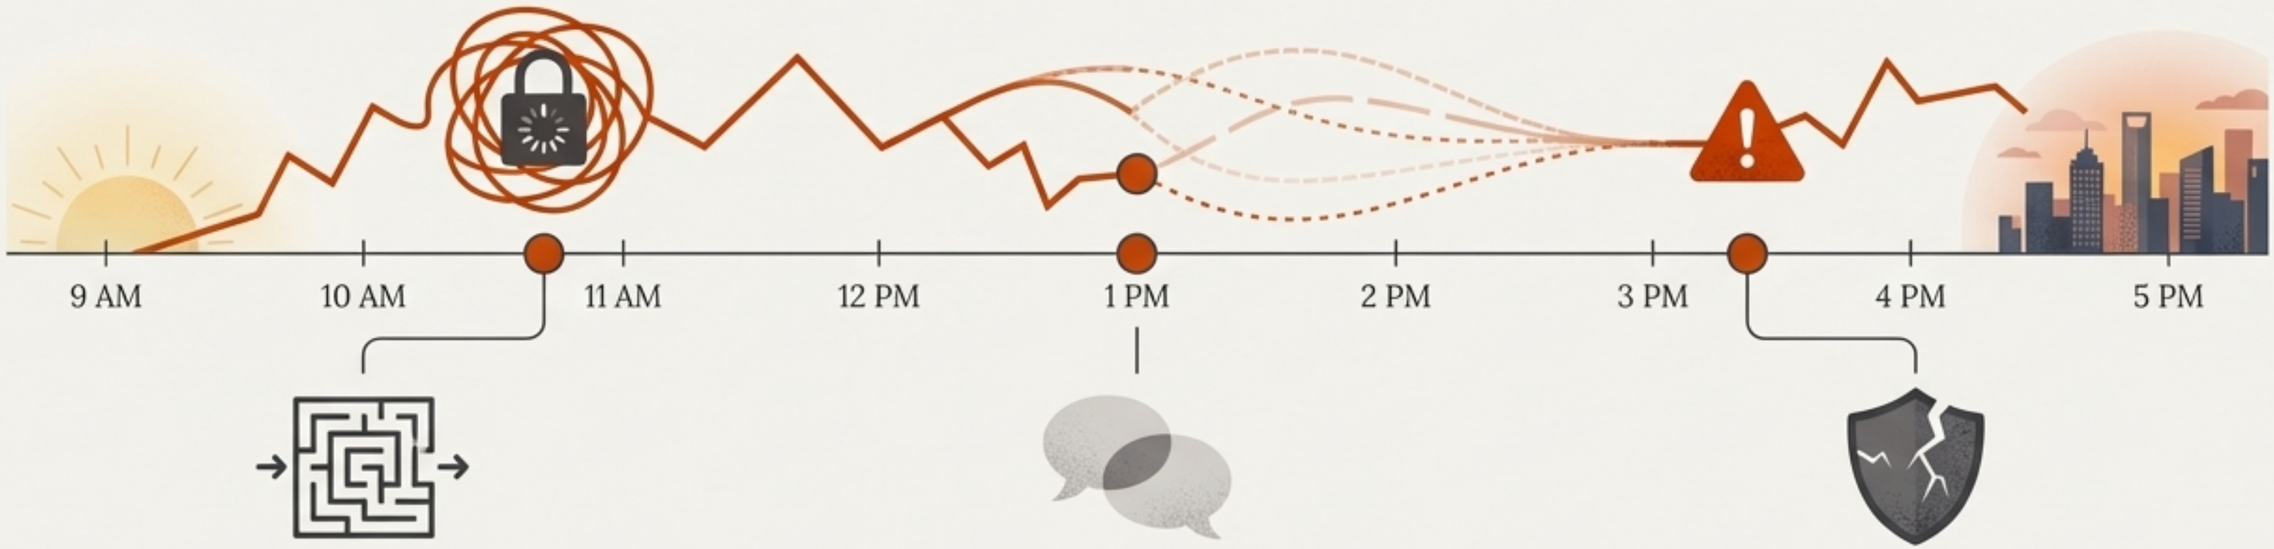
For multi-account users, the pain is a daily gauntlet.

Juggling multiple accounts isn't just inefficient; it's a cycle of friction that actively sabotages your focus, security, and time.

A Day in the Life of Alex, the Marketing Consultant



The Login Labyrinth

Wasted minutes on log-ins, 2FA prompts, and forgotten passwords. A 2-5 minute tax on every single switch.

Context-Switching Carnage

The brain's 'hangover' from task-hopping. It takes an estimated 23 minutes to fully refocus after each interruption.

Security Scares

The constant risk of cookie syncs, data leaks, and phishing links jumping between accounts on a shared browser.

The true cost is more than minutes. It’s a drain on your success and well-being.

The constant switching and overload aren’t just frustrating; they lead to tangible negative outcomes that affect your work, your team, and your personal life.

- Increased Burnout & Anxiety: 70% of workers feel overwhelmed, leading to sleep disruption from “phantom pings”.
- Missed Opportunities: Delayed invoices strain cash flow for freelancers. Critical updates get lost in the shuffle for teams.
- Siloed Communication: Fractured inboxes lead to miscommunication, dropped balls, and blame games over missed emails.
